STATE OF NEW YORK

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE

ALBANY, January 15, 1926.

To the Legislature of the State of New York:

I have the honor to transmit herewith to the Legislature a report of the Enumeration of the Inhabitants of New York State, taken as of June 1, 1925, as provided by Chapter 191, Laws of 1925.

The report is submitted in fifteen tables, as follows:

There was no antipathy in the Legislatures of 1875, 1876 and 1877 to statistical study as a prelude to state service of the people of our Commonwealth, Secretary of State John Bigelow, in 1877, even going so far as to advocate a permanent Census Bureau.

The Legislatures of 1892, 1905 and 1915, however, limited their enumeration appropriations to such small amounts that even the best informed press of the State frequently indulges in editorial utterance to the effect that "the sole purpose of the State Census is reapportionment."

Appropriations, until 1925, since 1875, had been so meagre that my predecessors in office of 1915 and 1905, both closed their reports to the Legislature with regrets that they had no money to tabulate anything but citizenship.

I deliberately open mine with an expression of deep satisfaction that I was given and have retained a sum sufficient, after meeting the expenses of mere enumeration, to enable me to promise the State Departments and the welfare agencies of the State, such tabulation of the "identification" items of the schedule as will enable them better to know and serve their communities.

In contact with State officials and welfare workers throughout the State, I found wide anxiety to increase the schedule, but knowing, as I found out in advance, that the enumeration and tabulation of New York State in 1920 cost $1,106,000, and expecting a very considerable increase in the State's population, I could not yield to requests that came to me, lest in yielding to any, I should finally yield to so many that the tabulation fund would be invaded.

The fundamental error of the State for fifty years had been to gather a dozen items of information and tabulate only one, and it would have been bad business on my part to so swell the costs of enumeration as to leave me an inadequate balance for tabulation of not only the enlarged but even the old schedule.

I personally recognized the high value of many of the suggestions, but beyond acquiring a deeper conviction of the need of at least quinquennial censuses of population in our polyglot commonwealth, and so standing more firmly than ever for the permanence of the present Constitutional provisions, at least until the Federal census shall have substituted quinquennial censuses, I was in a predicament similar to that of my predecessors.

I shall not at the present time present plans for contract, electric card tabulations of the 11,162,151 inhabitants of the State enumerated last year. I will say, however, that the co-operation of the Federal Census Bureau has been secured, and that agreement on the methods and mechanism will be completed within the next fortnight.

A total of thirteen questions was asked by the enumerators in the 1925 Census Enumeration (copy of field sheet as used, attached).

The thirteen questions covered the name of the person enumerated, residence as to street and number, relationship to the head of the family, color or race, sex, age at last birthday, nativity, number of years in the United States, citizen or alien; if naturalized, when and where; occupation and classification; and if an inmate of an institution, the person's residence when admitted. (See page 350 of statistical report, hereto appended.)

The enumeration was directed by a State Supervisor of Census, a deputy chief enumeration supervisor, with additional supervisors in charge in each county, borough or subdivision, the enumerators in the field reporting each day to their respective supervisors, who, in turn, being held responsible for the results in the district over which he or she had supervision, reported directly to the State Supervisor of Census.

Most careful preparation was made for the taking of the census. Chapter 191, Laws of 1925, was signed and became a law on March 25, 1925. The chief enumeration supervisor, Colonel Lafayette B. Gleason, was named almost immediately after, in order that the work of preparation might be carried on as speedily as possible, owing to the great mass of printed material required by the enumerators in the field, as well as the appointment of the enumerators.

Within a six weeks period a working force of 7,600 men and women was thoroughly organized, while the printing of the field sheets, booklets of instructions, and other matter was carried along without any loss of time. During that time fully one hundred conferences were held, many with the Federal Census Bureau, leading statisticians and authorities in their respective fields. The distribution of the mass of material to be used by the enumerators was expedited by the use of motor trucks. On Monday, June 1, everything was in readiness for the enumeration and the army of field workers began their duties.

Every possible effort had been made to acquaint the residents of New York State with the questions to be asked, the answers expected, the reason for the taking of the State Census, and asking for the fullest cooperation on the part of all persons with the enumerators.

Methods employed to this end included the following:

The use of the radio from all broadcasting stations in New York State.

The cooperation of the press.

The distribution of thousands of placards to all postoffices, railroad stations, Federal buildings, hotels, tourist agencies, steamship lines and all places where persons away from home during the period of the enumeration might gather. The display of these placards which called attention to the date of the enumeration, outlining the questions to be asked by the enumerators, and requesting the reader to communicate with the State Census Bureau at Albany in case of absence from home during the census period, was authorized by Postmaster General Harry S. New in all postoffices in New York State, while the United States Treasury Department authorized the display of the placards in all Federal buildings. Every railroad line operating in New York State, through its head officials, cooperated and displayed the placards from shortly before June 1 until the census had been completed. The New York State Hotel Men's Association likewise sanctioned the display of placards in all hotels within the State.

Excellent cooperation was also afforded the Secretary of State's office by the chambers of commerce, boards of trade and similar organizations in New York State, many of which displayed banners during the period of the census, urging all residents to cooperate in fullest measure with the enumerators as a part of their civic duty.

Placards explaining the reason for the census and the questions to be asked by the enumerators were also printed in ten different languages, including Italian, French, Hebrew, Chinese, Greek, Lithuanian, and distributed by the thousands in the foreign sections of the larger cities through the cooperation of the police departments of such cities. These placards attracted much attention and served the purpose of making the enumeration as complete as humanly possible.

All county and district census supervisors, outside of Greater New York, were summoned to the State Capitol in Albany in May, at which time the entire plan under which the field work was to be done was carefully explained by the State Supervisor of Census. A similar conference was held in New York City. Meetings later followed in each county in the State, at which time the supervisors went over all details with those who were to do the field work.

Under this plan, the State as a whole was thoroughly acquainted before June 1, with the object of the census, the questions that would be asked by the enumerators and the answers that would be expected. As a result, the enumeration proceeded most smoothly despite unfavorable weather conditions that prevailed during a portion of the time.

Each enumerator was required to file at the close of each day's work in the field, a card stating the number of hours worked and the number of persons enumerated. This procedure afforded a complete check of each day's work in the field.

Generally speaking, the eleven million and more residents of New York State met the enumerators in a manner that evinced a desire to cooperate in making the census as complete and as accurate as possible. In a few instances where information was refused an enumerator, it became necessary to summon that person into court. Such instances, however, were but rare.

In all cases where persons were away from home at the time the enumerator called, every effort was made to secure the information through sojourner's blanks. These blanks were filled out and returned without delay.

Special enumerators were used on the Indian reservations in New York State, a special field sheet being used by these enumerators.

All enumerators were required to submit their field sheets in duplicate, to the State Census Bureau at Albany. The work was practically completed by June 15. Supervisors and assistant supervisors were later called to the Census Bureau at Albany to assist in the checking. The balance of the supervisors will be called to Albany to serve during the period of continued tabulation.

The utmost care was used in the tabulation of the field sheets that followed their receipt at the Albany bureau. Wherever an instance occurred which might warrant a re-check in some district in which there might be a question as to what constituted the boundaries, an employee of the Census Bureau was dispatched without delay.

I should be ungrateful if I did not say, as I now do, that women as enumerators, with exceptions, of course,—in the case of the other sex, exceptions also—proved their capacity and conscientiousness in such a way that they should be used again in as large, if not larger number.

The tabulation as now completed gives New York State a population on June 1, 1925, of 11,162,151, of which 9,667,782, or 86.61 per cent, are citizens and 1,494,369, or 13.39 per cent, are aliens.

The State Census enumeration of 1915 credited the State with a population of 9,687,744, of which 8,059,515, or 83.2 per cent, were citizens, and 1,628,229, or 16.8 per cent, were aliens.

The State Census enumeration of 1905 gave New York State a population of 8,067,308, of which 7,062,988, or 87.6 per cent, were citizens, and 1,004,320, or 12.4 per cent, were aliens.

During the past ten years, or from 1915 to 1925, the population of New York State has increased 1,474,407, or 15.2 per cent, despite restricted immigration. Between 1905 and 1915, there was a population gain in New York State of 1,620,436, or 20.86 per cent.

The 1925 State Census enumeration credits New York City with a population of 5,873,356, or 52.6 per cent of the total population of the State, as compared to 5,047,221 in 1915, or 52 per cent of the State's total.

Of the 5,873,356 persons constituting the population of New York City, according to the 1925 census enumeration, there are 4,750,156 classified as citizens and 1,123,200 as aliens.

In 1915 the State census of that year showed a citizen population in New York City of 3,842,519, and an alien population of 1,204,702.

On June 1, 1925, there were sixty cities in New York State, these showing a combined population of 8,505,563, consisting of 7,161,827 citizens and 1,343,736 aliens.

On the same date there were 505 incorporated villages in New York State, showing a total population of 1,017,966, made up of 958,441 citizens and 59,525 aliens.

The population of New York State, outside of the cities and incorporated villages on June 1, amounted to 1,638,622, and consisted of 1,547,514 citizens and 91,108 aliens.

In view of the fact that the five-year period between 1920 and 1925 was one of readjustment following the War, with restricted immigration playing an important factor, it is not out of place to include here certain figures furnished by the United States Department of Labor, showing the large decrease in the number of immigrant aliens admitted to the United States, and who gave New York State as their intended future permanent residence, during the four fiscal years from 1922 to June 30, 1925, as compared with the four fiscal years from 1911 to 1914, when restricted immigration was not in effect. These figures, as well as those for the emigrant aliens departing from the United States and giving New York State as their last permanent residence, follow:

Fiscal Years	Immigrant aliens	Emigrant aliens	Net increase
1911.....	260,278	71,046	189,232
1912.....	239,275	84,533	154,742
1913.....	330,531	83,608	246,923
1914.....	344,663	76,017	268,646
Total.....	1,174,747	315,204	859,543
1922.....	91,543	65,886	25,657
1923.....	130,142	32,228	97,914
1924.....	166,749	28,983	137,766
1925.....	68,263	44,179	24,084
Total.....	456,697	171,276	285,421

The effects of restricted immigration on population in New York State is well illustrated by Table XV, showing the per cent of alien population in each county according to the State enumerations of 1905, 1915 and 1925. Bronx county, which had an alien population in 1915 of 19.89 per cent, is shown by the 1925 enumeration to now have an alien population of 16.65 per cent, while Kings county, in its alien population has dropped from 19.87 to 18.38 per cent, in the last ten years. New York county, in 1915, had an alien population of 31.13 per cent, but is shown by the 1925 enumeration as having an alien population of 25.08 per cent.

In some of the distinctly rural counties of the State, the percentage of alien population today is below that of 1905. In Ontario county, for instance, there is a 3.42 per cent in alien population as against 5.05 in 1915, and 3.78 in 1905, the same holding true with Orange, Putnam and other counties in the State.

Owing to the great shifting of population between 1915 and 1920, when cities and their humming industries attracted tens of thousands from the villages and rural communities, the cities were shown by the 1920 census as having grown unusually fast during the preceding five-year period, while more than 250 of the 500 and more incorporated villages in the State, lost in population.

The last five years have witnessed a shifting population in lessened measure, but with a drift more pronounced toward the incorporated villages and the rural sections, this being particularly true in proximity to the larger centers of population. Modern improvements and conveniences have played a part in this readjustment, with the ever increasing number of automobiles, bus and transportation lines facilitating travel and serving the purpose of more closely linking the cities and their business centers with the residential suburbs and rural sections.

In connection with this report, I desire at this time to express my sincere appreciation to the many agencies and persons that have contributed to making the enumeration complete and accurate.

Alance E. S. Knapp

Secretary of State.

New York State's Population Percentage of the Nation's Population at Federal Census Periods 1790 to 1920 and at State Census of 1925.

There had been only two decades since the year 1850 wherein New York State had grown faster than the Nation, namely, the years 1890-1900, until the State Census of 1925 was taken. That increase was due to South-Eastern European immigration. The increase 1920-1925 is largely from high birth-rate. The increase, 1920-1925, of the percentage of the Nation's population resident in New York State, however, has been so slight, that, if the Nation itself, since 1920, has grown faster than in the period 1910-1920, the slight gain of the percentage of the Nation resident in New York State from 981 in every 10,000 persons to 984, maybe wiped out before 1930. The figures upon which the calculation represented by the above curve was based are as follows:

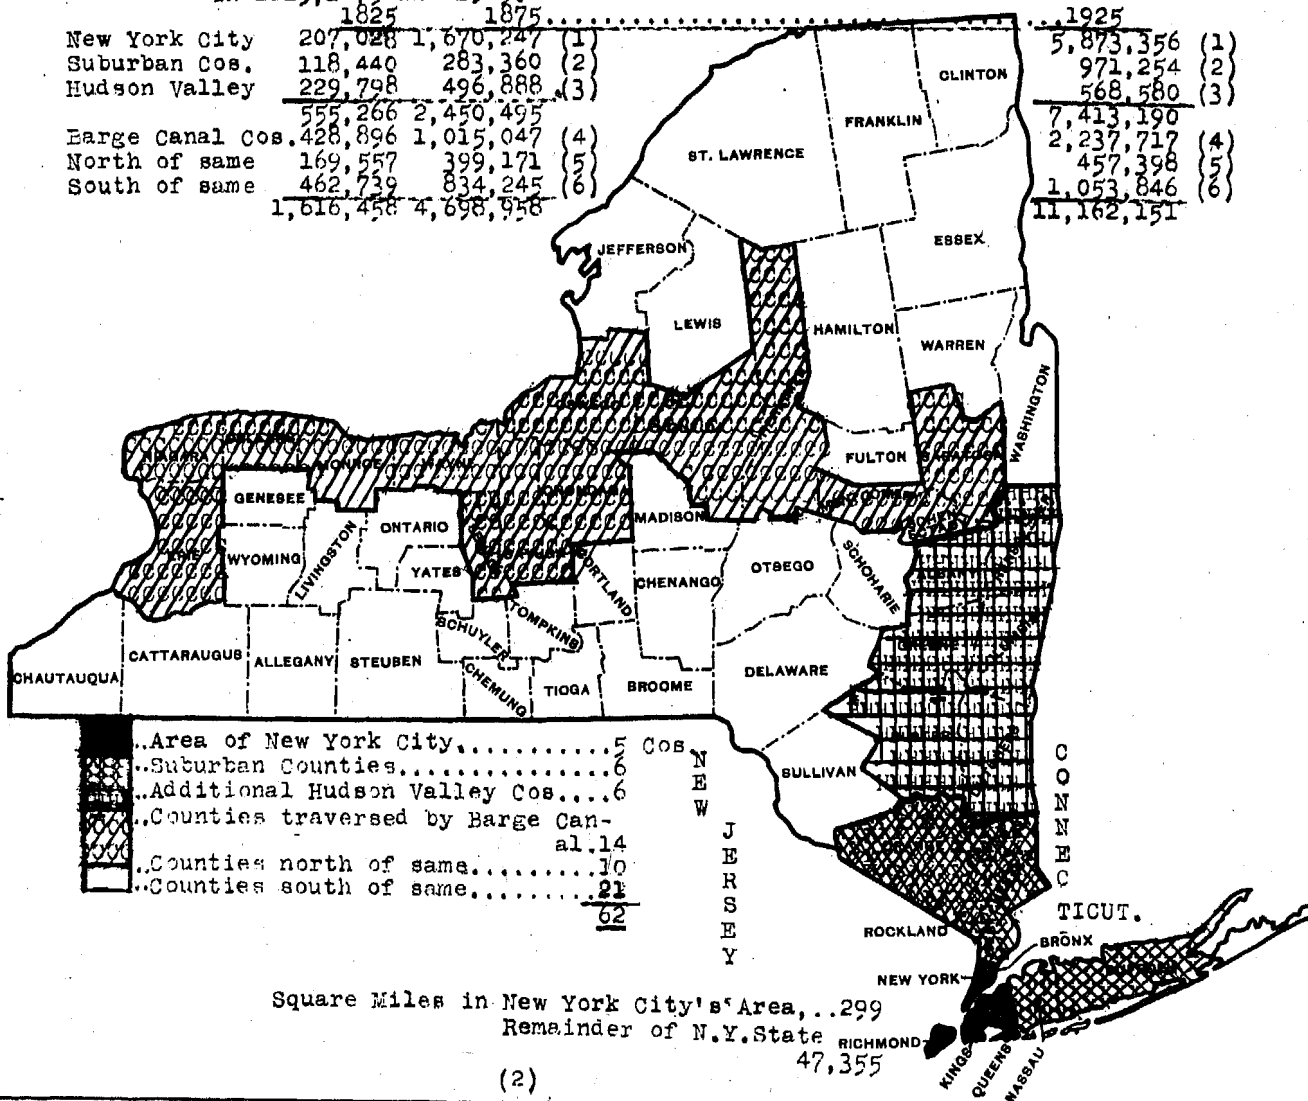

Population of the United States, June 1, 1925, on basis of its increase from April 15, 1910 to January 1, 1920.....	113,375,797
Population of New York State, June 1, 1925, as reported by your press announcement.....	11,162,151
Percentage of the Nation resident in New York State, June 1, 1925, on above basis.....	9.84
Percentage of the Nation resident in New York State, January 1, 1920.....	9.81
